THE BÖRIDS OR BÜRIDS 497–549/1104–54 Damascus and southern Syria

- 497/1104 Taghlab, also known as al-Ḥusayn
- 502/1108 Muḥammad b. Taghlab, also known as al-Muḥammad
- 506/1112 Ismaʿīl b. Muḥammad, also known as al-Muḥammad
- 520/1126 Muḥammad b. Muḥammad, also known as al-Muḥammad
- 525/1131 Muḥammad b. Muḥammad, also known as al-Muḥammad
- 528–549/1134–54 Abū al-Muḥammad, also known as al-Muḥammad

The ruling dynasty derived from Taghlab, ruling in the valley of Damascus (Taghlab b. Yūsuf I was slain, no. 91, 92), who after the early death of the child Yūsuf b. Taghlab became himself sole ruler in Damascus, founding a line which endured there for half a century. Taghlab and his son Muḥammad managed to maintain their power through skilful diplomacy with the Fatimids and timely agreements with the Frankish Crusaders, but these balancing policies were regarded with disfavour by the Ḥanafī scholars and the Ḥanafī ruling elite in Iraq.

Hence the later Börids came under increased pressure from the bellicosely Sunnī orthodox Zangids of Mosul and Aleppo (see below, no. 93), who attacked Damascus in 529/1135, and in 549/1154 the last Börīd Abaq had to abandon his capital to Nūr al-Dīn Maḥmūd b. Zangī.
